

I feel your current policy is good, that people can use cell phones while waiting for take off, and getting into the gate. It has long been said that the signal in the air would disrupt onboard equipment. If this is true I would say keep them off in the air. However since airlines have done away with food, movies, etc., It might make people's flights a little more enjoyable and productive to the business class.